NOTES AT THE THEATRE.

CARL WAGNER INTRODUCES A PLAY OF GERMAN DISTINCTION.

The First Performance of Grillparger's "flero and Leander" in This City-Salient Points in a Matinee Lot of Pieces.

Grillparzer's tragedy. "Des Meers und der Liebe Wellen," was acted in Vienna sixty-nine cears ago, but the representation at the Irving lace Theatre last night was described on the programme as the first in this country. The lassical dramas make upe small part of the répertoire in the German playhouses here. It takes novelty to attract attention from the nglish-speaking theatres and when the works of the great German dramatists are selected schiller and Goethe are heard. Grillparzer's plays need the care and ability expended on them in the principal court theatres abroad and without those qualities they would probably | puzzled the police force of this city, and until fail to attract even in the German-speaking countries, in spite of the beauty of their language. With the means ordinarily available in the German theatres here it is no cause for surprise that Grillparzer is offered so rarely. Some of the plays acted in the best fashion are intolerably dull to other than German taste. "Der Traumein Leben" for instance is one of Ther Traumein Leben' for instance is one of the most popular plays the Austrian dramatist ever wrote. But it does not make a very strong appeal to any but the German public.

Grillparza's version of the story of Hero and Leander met with failure at the outset just as most of his dramatic writing did. But it was ultimately appreciated highly and has comete be thought possibly the finest specimen of his poetic gifts. It is impossible to be insensible under any circumstances to the beauty of its language and the action of the drama is more direct and the articles than it is in some of his other plays. But it is not concelvable that the work would anywhere be tolerable without some striking talent in its two chief interpreters. This condition did not exist last aught. Carl Wagner as Leander could not be taken for the handsome, lovessick, impassioned youth in whom the interest of the audience must centre. Like most German actors in the standard plays, he was conventional and stilted in speech and action. And he possessed none of the physical charm necessary to create the impression the character must make. Ada Merito wis a handsome Hero and her acting was intelligent enough. She read the verse with evident understanding and knowledge of the way it should be delivered. Unlike her associate she lacked all suggestion of the classic style in her performance and was wholly modern. That tendency was in leed noticeable in all the women and marred occasionally the agreeable work of funstay Olmar, who as Mankleros was easily the best single feature of the production. the most popular plays the Austrian dramatist

Students of the Stanhope-Wheateroft Dramatic School enacted their new play at the Madison Square Theatre yesterday afternoon. Two of them, "A House of Cards," by W. C Van T. Sutphen, and "Racine," by Dodson I Mitchell, had only an act each. The latter possessed some merit in idea, but it had been poorly worked out. Louis XIV., King of France, is shown as having entired the wife of Racine to his apartments. The playwright comes to discuss a drama which the King has written and given to Raeine reconstruct. The monarch quickly hides Mme, Racine, and with the author reads a new scene in the play. It concerns, quite by chance, exactly such persons as they are, and in the same predicament. The single difference is that the man in Racine's fiction knows that his wife is in the royal ciutches. This widt gives excellent opportunities, but it is inadequately handled by Mr. Mitchell. His is inadequately handled by Mr. Mitchell. His little drama lacked atmosphere and dramatic climax. Instead of moving on and carrying the spectators along it falls off and toward the end begins to bore. The third play of the afternoon was a three-act farce, adapted from the French by Mrs. Akerstrom Bernard and called "A Jolly Mixnip." It was quite as commonplace as its title. It concerned a doctor and a lot of young women. A scene where all the persons are concaled in dark rooms and run in and out of many doors was funny in a conventional way. Of coarse this play and the others did not have a fair chance of success as il acted by students. a fair chance of success as if acted by students. Yet the actors in training did well and reflected credit on Mrs. Wheateroit, considering that only one has been under school preparation more than six months.

When "Sapho" was played at a Philadelphia theatre by a resident company, the woman was not shown semi-nude in the ballroom, the man did not carry her upstairs to her apartment, and life together was decidedly dull. The parquet was silently, in its disappointment, but the gallery was noisily resentful, and the hubbub of derision drowned the voices of the actors at times.

In the new Don Juan drama, which has failed in London, the famous roue is made to repent of at least one of his evil deeds and to beg pardon from the father of a dead girl whom he has sincerely loved. The parent refuses and has sincerely loved. The parent refuses and is slain by the libertine, who is in turn killed in a duel. Supernatural phenomena ensue. A statue of the father implores God to forgive the sinner, whose body, presumably still containing his soul, ascends to heaven accompanied by the spirit of the girl. It is a weird spectacle, but it does not save the play.

Hall Caine has altered the prologue of "The Christian" as performed in England. John

Christian as performed in England John Storm's father is eliminated, and the son's decision to abandon a political career is declared to Glory. The curtain falls on an altercation between the two lovers. This is said to be an improvement.

Pittsburg has an officer called the Director of Public Safety, and in that he has power as a theatrical censor. He insisted on an expurgation of the first act of "Zaza" before permitting its performance in that city.

SECOND WAGNER CYCLE BEGINS. "Das Rheingold" Given Yesterday at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The afternoon eyele of the Nibelungen music dramas in their entirety began yesterday at the Metropolitan Opera House. "Das Rheingold" was given by the same collection of singers heard in the opera a month ago with a single exception. Mile. Pevny was ill and could not appear as Woglinde, the first of the Rhine Daughters. Her indisposition might not have embarrassed the management if a performance of "Carmen" had not been given last night in Philadelphia So nobody was available to take her place and it looked for a while as if there might be no performance of "Das Rheingold," merely because one of the trio of maidens was missing.

cause one of the trio of maidens was missing. Mme, de Vere, who has proved her value to the company before during the present season, came to the rescue, however, and the opera was sung. A chorus girl went through the usual evolutions under the Khine, while Mme, de Vere sang the music in the wings. It was evident that the voice did not come from the singer in view of the audience.

This series of representations is undertaken presumably for the benefit of the suburban patrons of opera. The weather vesterday was not adapted to travel so the audience was not large. The fine features of the first performance were again repeated. These include Ernest Van Dyck's selendidly picturesque and eloquent acting as Loge. Anton Van Rooy's maiestle and sonorous Wolan and Marie Brema's Frickn. Yesterday afternoon she was in good voice and the warmth and earnestness of her acting served to make her performance memorably fine. The evolutions of the likine Daughters were again without vivacity or spirit, but the rainbow bridge to Waihalla was not extinguished, so without vivacity or spirit, but the rainbow bridge to Waihalla was not extinguished, so there was cause for some congratulation over this improvement in the stage management. The performance was throughout worthy of the subject matter on which Mr. Frank Damrosch had spent his time and the talents of his singers. To have put such elevating music in the reach of the public is in itself an admirable achievement for the Musical Art Society. To have trained his singers to its finished delivery as they were last night reflects the greatest credit on Mr. Damrosch. It was one of the best concerts that the society has ever given in its history and will add greatly to its repute among those interested in what is best and noblest in music.

EUROLARS IN POUGHKEEPSIE.

Crimes That Have Puzzled the Police for 18 Months May Now Be Cleared Up.

POUGHKEEPSIE, March 15 .- For a year and a half past a series of daring burglaries have recently not a clue had been obtained to the identity of the skilful burglar who conceived and carried out the crimes with such uniform success. A young man of the name of Evart J. Traver is now under arrest and through him Chief of Police Charles McCabe hopes to be able to clear up the mysterious burglaries.

The first of the series of burgiaries occurred a year ago last summer. Elmer Eastmead, clerk of the Board of Health, had been taking a vacation in Connecticut and while he and his family were away he placed the family silverware and lewelry in the bank. Upon his return he took it out and the next day his wife was summoned to the bedside of a sick relative and he closed the house until she should return. The night of the day that Mrs. Eastmead went away the house was entered and looted of all articles of value. Entrance was effected through a rear window by means of a immy. A reward was offered for the recovery i the property and apprehension of the thief, out the burglar had covered his tracks so effeetually that no trace was obtained of him or the stolen property.

Several months ago the home of Mr. Eastmead's mother, on Noxon street, was entered between 7 and 8 o'clock at night and ranacked. The burglar waited until the maid and Mr. Charles Eastmead, a son, had left the house, and then walked boldly up to the front door and opened it with a Jimmy, Mrs, Eastmead was out of town and there was nobody in the house to interrupt him. He placed a chair so that anybody attempting to push the door open from the ouside would knock it down and open from the ousside would knock it wow and then proceeded to loot the house. He obtained jewelry valued at several hundred dollars. The maid returned at 7 o'clock, and in endeavoring to open the front door knocked the chair down as the burglar had planned, and he made his escape through a rear door. The home of ex-City Chamberlain Peter lines on Market street, was next to be Attached to the chain was a little gold charm in the shape of a boar. It is the chain that promises to be the undoing of Evart J. Traver, who is now in jail as a self-confessed thief, having waived examination to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of stealing from his employers, Adriance, Platt & Co., manufacturers of this city. Traver is a married man, who lives with his wife and father on Jay street, almost in the rear of Mr. Hulme's residence. He was convicted a number of years ago of committing several small burglaries in Poughkeepsie and was committed to the Elmira Reformatory, where he served a term of five years. After his release from the reformatory he returned to Poughkeepsie, and, as he seemed anxious to do right, a place was given him at the Buckeye Works by Adriance, Platt & Co., and he earned as high las $20 a week.

Yesterday Chief McCabe received a com-plaint from the Buckeye Works that they had been robbed of a number of brass-knotted plaint from the Buckeye Works that they had been robbed of a number of brass-knotted aspiral screws, copper hammers and several valuable chisels and other tools. The chief found that Traver had not been at work for a week and that he had started for the works that morning, but had returned home. He visited Traver at his house and wrung from him a confession that he had stolen the screws and hidden them in a bag under a storehouse at the Buckeye Works. The chief went with him to the place and found the bag, but the screws were missing. Traver said that some-body had taken them. He was placed under arrest, and at Police Headquarters he disclaimed all knowledge of the Eastmead robberies, but said that the night Mr. Hulme's residence was robbed he was in the rear of his yard, which adjoins Mr. Hulme's lawn, and saw "Tom" Bolin, a colored man, loitering around Mr. Hulme's house. The day following the robbery, he said. Bolin showed him and his father a gold watch and chain with a boar charm. Bolin said that he never had such a watch or showed it, and twenty-flue colored triends of Bolin said that he hever had such a watch he never showed it to them.

Ina-much as in the advertised description of the property-stolen from Mr. Hulme's no monton was made of the boar charm. Chief McCabe is anxious to know how Traver came to know that such an article of jewelry was misss anxious to know how Traver came to snow that such an article of jewelry was miss-ng. He is busy gathering up threads of evi-lence and it is believed that before he com-oletes his case Traver will tell all he knows.

HUDSON COUNTY FREEHOLDERS.

The Law to Reduce Their Number to Nine Referred to the People.

The Hudson County, N. J., Board of Freeholders held a special meeting vesterday afternoon and adopted a resolution referring to the voters of each municipality in the county, for acceptance or rejection, the law recently passed by the Legislature reducing the membership of the board to nine. It is now twenty-eight, of the board to nine. It is now twenty-eight, and under an old law recently unearthed can be increased to thirty-two, or more if the people vote to reject the new law. The bill reducing to nine was introduced by Senator Alian I. McDermott. The referendum clause was attached to it in order to meet the objections of Essex county, which does not desire any change in its board. Hudson county will vote on it at the coming spring election, and if it is accepted, the new Freeholders will be elected at the election next fait. They will be elected at large the same as members of Assembly.

BOARDER SMOKED OPH'S

So the Gerry Society Took Away the Landlady's Two Little Boys.

An anonymous letter stating that two small boys were living in rooms at 108 West Twentyseventh street, where their mother rented seventh street, where their mother rented rooms to a boarder who smoked opium, was received by the Gerry society yesterday. Agents Moore and Pisarro investigated, and on the second floor of the house found William and Eddie Mulholland, 11 and 4 years old respectively. Their mother, Mrs. Annie Mulholland, was out and so was the boarder. In his room the agents found a complete opium layout, which they confiscated. The children were taken to the society's rooms for the night. night.

17-Year-Old Elzabeth Dougherty Missing. Elizabeth Dougherty, 17 years old of 182 Boerum street, Williamsburg, was reported to the police of the Stagg street station yesterday as missing since Monday. The girl was employed in a factory. On Monday afternoon she visited an aunt in Manhattan. After she left her aunt's house all trace of her was lost. Her mother requested police aid yesterday in finding her. She said that, as far as she knew, her daughter had not kept company with any young man.

No News of William Harvey Spowers. Mrs. William Harvey Spowers of 18 West 104th street, the wife of the iron merchant who disappeared on Oct. 25, 1898, said yesterday that she was still without information regarding her husband's whereabouts. Mr. Stowers, whose name has incorrectly appeared in the newspapers as spooners, had several hundred dollars with him on the day he disappeared. He was 30 years old, fair and of medium height. a Company to Run His Business-Traded the Stock for Securities-"Confidence Queen" Got $15,000 Worth-Two Arrests. Franz Mayer, who two years ago was the President of a prosperous sign-manufacturing ompany, told yesterday in the Essex Market police court how he had been defrauded of property of the value of $100,000, practically all he had, by the notorious Ellen Peck, the 'Confidence Queen," and a gang of swindlers associated with her. Mayer appeared in court to prosecute Hugh Mason and George N. Van

Expecting to be sent to the front he arranged to wind up his business by organizing a stock company which he alled the Franz Mayer Sign Material Manufacturing Company. It was capitalized for $100,000. All of the stock, which was valued at par, was held by Mayer and his wife. Mayer said yesterday that when the company was ormed his confidential clerk introduced him o Mason and Van Zand who posed as representatives of an English syndicate. They professed to be anxious to buy some of the stock of Mayer's company and after some negotiations he transferred to them $46,000 worth of the Mayer had no doubt as to the value of the securities until the holders of the stock for the deeds to 10,000 acres of coal and timber lands on the banks of the Sandy River in Kentucky. Afterward he was introduced to a woman known as Jessle B. Seal, who was then living at 20 Lafayette place. She got $8,000 worth of the stock in exchange for mortgages on property she was supposed to own in Atlantic City. Some time afterward the others introduced him to Mrs. Ellen Peck and she got $15,000 worth of the stock, giving him in payment deeds to 3,000 acres of grazing land in Puesdo county. Tex.

Mayer had no doubt as to the value of the securities until the holders of the stock he had parted with met and ousted him from the management of the business, which was carried on at 538 East Eighty-seventh street. This was followed up by the sale of the property by the Sheriff to satisfy a claim brought by one of the stockholders. The concern was then reorganized under the name of the New York Sign Material Company and the shares still held by Mayer were rendered useless. He consulted his counsel, J. H. Winans, who, with the aid of the District Attorney, investigated the character of the deeds and mortgages which Mayer had received from Mason, Van Zand, Mrs. Peck and the Seal woman, and found that they were fletitious. Mason and Van Zand were then arrested on a warrant issued by Magistrate Hogan.

Mayer said in the police court vesterday that after being wiped out of business all of the reaf estate he owned was taken away from him under foreclosure proceedings. It consisted of the buildings at 522 East Eighty-sixth street, 347 East Eighty-third street, 536 East Eighty-seventh street and 580 East 158th street, together valued at $60,000 exclusive of mortgages. He did not have a chance to go to the war either, as his regiment was not called into service. "One year ago," he remarked bitterly." She alleges that she was married to Lachman at 122 Johnson avenue, on Jan. 22, 1809, by Rabbi Rosen. The plaintiff testified that he was drunk at the time and had no knowledge that a marriage was taking place. He was asked if he had ever been place. He was asked if he had ever been drunk before and he replied: "Oh, yes, more as fifty times already." Jacob Lachman, a son of the plaintiff, testified that he found his father on the night in question in a stupefied condition and that he took him home. Jeremah P. Burke and George Koferi also testified that he was drunk on the night of the alleged marriage. Nannie E. Lachman, a daughterin-law, testified that he was brought home drunk and was put in bed by his two sons. Mrs. Lachman said that Lachman was not drunk on the night of the marriage. She said that after the marriage he visited her three or four times a week.

DOLLY WAS A RELIGIOUS DOG. She Went to Church and Belonged to the Christian Endeavor Society. The family of the Rev. Wilbur Fiske Wood, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Stapleton, Staten Island, is mourning the loss of a St. Bernard dog named Dolly, which died on Tuesday. A sociable of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church was to have been held Tuesday night at Mr. Wood's house in Brownell street, but as the guests arrived Mr. Wood informed them that the dog had died that day and the family felt her loss so keenly that day and the family felt her loss so keenly that the sociable would have to be postponed. Doily attended church regularly. Every Sunday morning found her lying by a front new while her master conducted the services in the pulpit. Her name was on the roll of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society, her dues to the society were paid regularly and her name was read by the secretary when the roll was called. This was not liked by several of the members of the society.

Burglar Away. A burglar ransacking a bureau in a room of the house at 348 Clifton avenue, Newark, early yesterday morning, awakened the occupants, Mr. and Mrs. Rodolphus R. Fairchild. Mr. Fairchild's first impulse was to ask his wife if she heard any noise, but as she appeared to be asleep and he feared the consequences of asleep and he feared the consequences of arousing her, if his suspicions proved correct, he kept silent. Presently he saw a man bending over the bureau. He jumped out of bed and made a dash for the thief.

"Hey there" shouted Mr. Fairchild. "What are you doing? get out!"

The burglar fled into the hall and, almost tomoling down the stairs, escaped. When Mr. Fairchild returned to the bedroom Mrs. Fairchild said that she had known of the burglar's presence in the room, but had kept quiet, fearing that her husband might provoke an encounter with him and get hurt. The burglar got away with a gold watch and chain, a gold brough, a gold ring, a purse containing $15, and much silverware.

CAST OF THE DEAN COMEDY

KELLER STICKS TO IT THAT KEL-LOGG WAS THE HEAVY MAN. Both Tried to Discharge One of the Ladies of

Gambling a Little Now-Frank J. Wright Had the Agency for Dutchess County. Sam Keller testified further yesterday in the General Sessions on the trial of James B. Kellogg for conspiracy and grand larceny in connection with the E. S. Dean Company. Kellogg was the man behind the game and worked the wires. Alfred R. Goslin posed as a broker for the Dean company. Charlie Weinman took charge of the mailing business clerks. Ferrand and Miss Veith, knew that the firm was doing a crooked business. Ferrand was chief of the office staff. When Keller stated that Miss Crofut, one of the clerks, knew the sort of business that was being done by the concern, Mr. Davis asked him whether or not he was sure of this, and he said:

"Well, once she did something that I told her not to do and I attempted to discharge her. She wouldn't quit. I appealed to Kellogg and he discharged her, but she wouldn't go. I inferred from this that she must have known all about the business that was going on there and I concluded it would never do to discharge her, so I was careful not to have any more trouble with her. When Kellogg and I made arrangements to go into the Register Company, after the failure of one of our wheat nool schemes, we concluded that we would have to take Miss Crofut in as eashier."

"When have you last seen A. R. Goslin?" asked Mr. Davis.

"I saw him yesterday in an office downtown."

"Isn't it a fact that you and Goslin are workstated that Miss Crofut, one of the clerks,

Isn't it a fact, that you and Goslin are work-

"Isn't it a fact, that you and Goslin are working together in this prosecution?"
No. sir, 'said Keller, in a loud voice.
Mr. Davis wanted to know whether Keller was backing a gambling game in the Glisev Club in a Broadway hotel, and whether he knew of the Victoria Club's game or a gambling game that was conducted by the Astoria Club in Forty-third street. Keller said that he wasn't willing to admit that any of the places referred to could be considered gambling houses. They were simply clubs where cards were played. The club members had a system of playing by which each man bought five dolar's worth of twenty-flye cent chips and, a litof playing by which each man bought five dotar's worth of twenty, five each chips and a little game of freeze-out in hearts, was played, out it was all among friends. Each member contributed one chip toward the kitty. He dided that he didn't see that it was necessary to bring his friends into trouble by mentioning the names of the men he claved with.

the names of the men he played with.

Frank J. Wright, who in 1806 had been employed as an electricism by the New York Central Railroad Company, testified that he threw up his pob with the railroad company to accept the agency for Dutchess county for the Dean company.

"I thought it would be a good scheme to take the agency if I could get it," said the witness, "so I went down to the office of the Lean company on Broadway and there met Mr. Kellogg, Kellogg told me that the territory was being covered by an agent who was a relative of one of the directors of the company. I said that if that territory was being covered no one in Dutchess county knew it, for no one up there had ever heard of the Dean company. After inrither talk Kellogg went into a private office and held a conversation with some one and coming out again he told me that the director said that he was willing to cast his relative aside if I desired to act as agent for the commany. They agreed to give me 10 per cent, on all of the business I brought in. Finally a merchant up in Dutchess county told me that the Dean company was not on the level. I went down and told Kellogg that. Dun & Co. rated the Dean company as having only $10,000 capital and Kellogg said that he was willing to bet that the Dean company as having only $20,000 right in the office and that he was willing to bet that the Dean company had a million dollars stock.

The trial will be continued to-day. ifilion dollars stock." The trial will be continued to-day.

JERSEY'S BACK-DOOR LAWYERS. Senate Votes to Repeal the Act by Which

They Have Been Admitted. TRENTON, N. J., March 15 .- The Senate today passed the repealer of the Dunn act regarding the examination of candidates for admission to the bar. Many years ago ex-Congressman John T. Dunn of Elizabeth applied for a license to practice law and there was objection to his examination because he worked at a trade while he was a law student. The xaminers declined to allow him to take the examination. Later, when he was elected a ember of the Legislature, he secured the entment of a law providing for the examinaion of any law student recommended by five other students who carned their living outside of the law offices while preparing for admission to the bar, passed the examination. In advocating the passage of the repealer to-day Senator Pitney sand that the effect of the Dunn act had been to make lawyers of men who knew no law. It had resulted discreditably to the profession and injuriously to the public. With this act repealed there would be no danger of the rejection of any worthy candidate by the Supreme Court. The repealer was opposed vigorously by Senator Martin of Sussex, a leading north Jersey lawyer, but only five of his colleagues voted with him against it. It is believed that Gov. Voorhees will sign the bill. It will go into effect July 4, and students now registered are not affected by it.

The Assembly to-day passed Mr. Benny's bill providing for the establishment of a State with the surface of the colleagues will be sufficiently and students now registered are not affected by it.

The Assembly to-day passed Mr. Benny's bill providing for the establishment of a State nder this law he, and afterward hundreds of the Assembly to-day passed Mr. Benny a bit oviding for the establishment of a State mai school in Newark and authorizing an propriation of $300,000 for it. the Senate confirmed the nominations of ibur E. Heisley and John F. Poster for Judge d Prosecutor of the Pleas respectively is smooth county.

Association for Improving Condition of the Poor Is Short of Funds.

The Finance Committee of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor is experiencing much difficulty this winter in raising sufficient money to meet the many demands upon the association. The organization has received, since Oct. 1 last, nearly forty-five hundred appliations for aid. The number of contributions to the association has been as great as usual, but the average amount has been much smaller. The sum necessary to meet expenditures incurred and maintain the work for the balance of the fiscal year is $15,000 in addition to moneys already contributed. The Finance Committee of the association is composed of Krulton Cutting. George Blagden, Andrew Mills, Theodorus B. Woolsey and Robert Shaw Minturn, Treasurer. All contributions should be sent to 105 East Twenty-second street. has received, since Oct. 1 last, nearly forty-five

John Bogart, engineer, Major Fred T. Leigh, signal officer. Major Louis M. Greer, Major John Butterfield Holland and Major Charles F. Von Benthuysen.

The review was tollowed by the formal presentation of the State and battery medals won last year, and after that came a drill in field tactics and mechanical managures. There was a first-rate attendance and despite the fact of there being several "raw uns" on the floor the practical work was performed with great credit. There was no mistaking the looks of interest and approval on the faces of the General and staff when the battery went through the work of dismounting and remounting the heavy 4-inch guns and their carriages and there was frequent applause from the spectators during this and the firing drill with Gatting guns that concluded the managures. The medals awarded were as follows:

fines of the Stranahan Mortgage Tax. Edwin F. Howell of the Serial Association of Brooklyn presided.

Charles O'Connor Hennessey of the Franklin Society offered a set of resolutions in the form of a protest to be sent to the members of the Legislature which were adopted.

Lawyer W. H. Hildreth declared that the passage of the bill in its present form meant bankruptey for the loan and building associations which have about $38,000,000 outstanding on mortgages. He declared that the argument that the lender under the bill would have to pay the tax was untrue, as large loan companies in anticipation of the passage of the bill are arranging to draw up mortgages so as to include the proposed tax in the amount to be paid by the borrower. Other speakers denounced it as a tax on the poor man's savings. A committee of seven was appointed to go to Albany and wait upon Goy. Roosevelt and try and induce him and members of the Legislature to favor an amendment which will exempt loan and building associations from the operations of the bill. A letter was received from ex-Senator Lexow, who is President of the Nyack Association, in which he declared that he was doing everything in his power to enlist the surport of up-State members of the Legislature to favor the amendment.

A New Magazine. The Smart Set, a new magazine published in New York, London and Paris, has appeared here for March, apparently modelled somewhat upon Lady Randolph Churchill's Anglo-Saxon Review. It has a great show of well-known talent. Of the twenty-five names that appear among the contributing authors, the majority of people who read magazines at all will recognize from fifteen to twenty of them. This involves a somewhat dangerous programme through the setting of a standard of notoriety that it may be difficult to maintain; but the venture is none the less interesting.
